

About Trusterra

Trusterra is passionate about meeting and exceeding our customers IT and communication needs through a wide range of web and mobile solutions and innovative products. In addition to having a team of passionate engineers, usability specialists and developers at the top of their game, we bring over 40 years of combined field experience, building and deploying mission critical systems in a diverse range of industries from industrial manufacturing to healthcare to legal and government services delivery. The depth of our experience means our solutions and products are not only technically sound but that they are backed with solid research, consulting, project management and risk management skills.

Our Mission & Commitment

- We create and bring to market cutting edge solutions and products based on the best technology available.
- Our products are based on ideas that challenge the status quo, and change the way people think, live, and work.
- We are committed to treating our employees, partners, and communities with fairness, respect, and excellence.

We believe it takes more than technological prowess and top notch technical skills to build mission critical solutions that stand the test of time. We need a continuous flow of fresh ideas [Innovation], an active approach to managing downside [Risk Management] and a keen sense for spotting and eliminating productivity sapping work [Efficiency] We keep these key commitments at the forefront of all of our activities and projects.

Unique and Compelling Solutions & Products

In addition to providing top flight e-Business solutions to our clients' organizations, we continuously seek opportunities to channel our expertise into developing unique and compelling products for various vertical markets. We believe strongly in the synergistic and mutually enriching impact our two practices of consulting and product development have on one another. To date our efforts in this area have resulted in Scoop™, a fresh, novel product focused on communication efficiency. Scoop is a great example of our product development approach at Trusterra. It is based on deep technical and market research and brings together many of the efficiency principles to which we are committed. No wonder it is already changing the way people communicate!
